Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The American Senator: A Novel I Never could understand why any body should ever have begun to live at Dillsborough, or why the population there should have been at any time recruited by new-comers. That a man with a family should cling to a house in which he has once established himself is intelligible. The butcher who supplied Dillsborough, or the baker, or the iron-monger, though he might not drive what is called a roaring trade, nevertheless found himself probably able to live, and might well hesitate before he would encounter the dangers of a more energetic locality. But how it came to pass that he first got himself to Dillsborough, or his father, or his grandfather before him, has always been a mystery to me. The town has no attractions, and never had any. It does not stand on a bed of coal, and has no connection whatever with iron. It has no water peculiarly adapted for beer, or for dyeing, or for the cure of maladies. It is not surrounded by beauty of scenery strong enough to bring tourists and holiday travelers. There is no cathedral there to form, with its bishops, prebendaries, and minor canons, the nucleus of a clerical circle. It manufactures nothing specially. It has no great horse fair, or cattle fair, or even pig market, of special notoriety. Every Saturday, farmers and graziers and buyers of corn and sheep do congregate in a sleepy fashion about the streets; but Dillsborough has no character of its own, even as a market-town. Its chief glory is its parish church, which is ancient and inconvenient, having not as yet received any of...
