When we make our print from this, the tones are reversed again, this second reversal bringing them right. Such a print is a positive. We examine a print by reflected light, that is, the light falls on to the surface of the print and is thrown back or bent back. But if we make a print on glass, using for the purpose a dry plate, we still have a positive, but one which we must examine by looking through instead of at. Such a positive, because we can see through it, is often called a transparency. We examine it by transmitted light. Transparency, then, is a generic term for a positive picture on glass, or celluloid, or other transparent support. The support may even be of ground or opal glass, or the emulsion may have something added...
