Philippians i, 9, 10, 11. Church Debts. I am going to speak very plainly of Church Debts to-night. For some time I have waited for an opportunity of doing so, and the opportunity is now given me in the double fact that this is the last Sunday in the Church year, the time to cast up accounts and make new beginnings, and that on this Twenty-second Sunday after Trinity, the Church in her Gospel and Epistle has something to say of debts and debtors. And because one of the rubrics in the Prayer Book prevented my reading this Gospel and Epistle this morning, I have read to you the Gospel as the second lesson for this evening, and you have heard the Epistle read in connection with the text of this sermon. On the subject of debts and debtors the Gospel is direct. The Epistle apparently is less direct; only apparently however, for I hope to show you shortly how pertinent the text is to the question of church indebtedness and the way in which that indebtedness should be met and paid. And this I pray, that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge and in all judgment; that...
